

“God’s design for women - Biblical womanhood for today”. Author: Sharon James.

“What do you do?” is the question that defines our value and significance in today’s world. And women are free now to enter any occupation - but not always so free to devote themselves to their families in the way that many would like.”

“Biblical womanhood is a watershed issue. Many today say that we can trust the Bible, but not on this matter. The kind of interpretative techniques used to ‘explain away’ the biblical teaching on manhood and womanhood leads to widespread weakening of confidence in the authority of scripture. And once we lose confidence in the Word of God, then we have no basis from which to proclaim the gospel.”

This book can be used for a study group over 8 meetings or over 16 by looking at each chapter.

Sharon examines Biblical womanhood and the effects of feminism and culture on our thinking, then looks at Biblical Women’s ministries. It is sound biblically, and helpful to clarify our thinking and what has shaped it so that we can make wise decisions about our lives and not be conformed to the culture we have grown up in, but transformed by the will and word of God to become the women God created us to be with our identity founded in his design and saving love through Jesus.
